

Airlie Site

Contact: Tom Wood (twood@gmu.edu)

The Airlie Foundation tract encompasses 875 ha in Fauquier County, Virginia. Land use in the tract is a mixture of second growth forest and cleared land used for grazing. The site is embedded in the piedmont physiographic province in an area of strongly rolling topography. The property has a variety of aquatic habitats which have been utilized most extensively for observations and experiments involving migratory waterfowl some of which served as inspiration for the film “Fly Away Home”.

The property is owned by the Airlie Foundation.
